

Hunter Emkay

writing thrilling and serious fiction, blogging not quite so seriously

Hunter Emkay had an idyllic childhood in small-town New Zealand, then moved to the big smoke cities of her home country and the U.K. to work for many years in corporate I.T. Returned down-under for some much needed quiet - but all that suburban madness drove her to kill people in her fiction.

Hunter is currently writing a series of psychological thrillers, but lately the tech-girl mouldering inside has escaped to deliver her first non-fiction technical writer's guide - Evernote for Writers.

Today Hunter shares her fictional and real life with a small family of people, and a large family of animals, and a lot of kookaburras and cockatoos, and a bandicoot or echidna. But she's not a kangaroo.

WHY SHE'S A WRITER

"Simple: It's been a lifetime dream now come true - to tell a story, to touch someone, to entertain."
